

RTD's new year-long program, Zero Fare for Youth, to begin next month

<Your organization name> and the Regional Transportation District \(RTD\) are excited to partner on Zero Fare for Youth, an initiative designed to encourage transit usage for a future generation of transit users. Starting Sept. 1, youth ages 19 and under can enjoy the convenience of using RTD services at no cost until Aug. 31, 2024, by simply presenting a valid student or government-issued ID, a full list of acceptable ID is available at rtd-denver.com/youth.

Using public transportation can lead to substantial cost savings, enabling families and students to allocate their resources more efficiently. Additionally, transit enhances mobility, increases accessibility and encourages independence and flexibility.

Transit can, of course, be used for daily commutes to school and work, but RTD also provides services that make connections to entertainment and sports venues, popular shopping and restaurants districts offering a well-rounded and diverse transit experience for young customers. By reducing the need for private vehicles, public transit offers a safe and convenient solution to get customers where they need to go.

To learn more about Zero Fare for Youth, visit rtd-denver.com/youth.